The time to act is now, say Calgary groups organizing fundraisers for grief-stricken Japan.

The Pacific nation has bared the brunt of a 9.0-magnitude earthquake and subsequent tsunami, along with facing constant threats of a nuclear meltdown in recent days.

While thousands are believed to be dead or missing, dozens gathered at the Calgary Buddhist Temple for a sombre service yesterday morning.

Local Sensei Kyoto Ikuta said his niece, her husband and three children were lucky to escape danger in the Japanese city of Sendai — one of the areas hardest hit by the tsunami. “It’s a shock.... We have to do something,” he said. Ikuta’s mindset is shared by members of the Calgary Japanese Community Association, who met Saturday night to begin organizing a fundraiser for this weekend.

Supporting Japan

- Fundraiser. Rocky Oishi said the Calgary Japanese Community Association fundraiser will be held Saturday at the Calgary Nikkei Cultural and Senior Centre. A time has yet to be set.
- U of C. Those attending the bake sale at the University of Calgary today are encouraged to either bring a cash donation or some items to add to the sale.

“We are trying to help,” said president Rocky Oishi. “We are deeply saddened by this. It’s such a tragedy.”

Meanwhile, the Japanese Students’ Association at the University of Calgary has teamed with the University Multi-Asian Club to hold a fundraising bake sale in the science theatres building starting at 10 a.m. today, said co-organizer Melissa Ng.

Legacy of 'reluctant artist' lives on

After losing her daughter to suicide two years ago, Kathy Briant is trying to ensure her daughter's legacy lives on.

As a graduate of the Alberta College of Art and Design and a graphic artist, Shannon was always creating — everything from sketches to acrylics to watercolours.

However, she suffered from mental illness for several years and was always reluctant to share her art.

After Shannon took her own life in 2009, Briant found more than 150 pieces of original art hidden away in storage.

"She never got married, never had kids, didn't leave anything behind," said Briant. "Her only legacy is the art, and I'll do what I can to make sure that people know she was a good artist."

This week Briant will be hosting The Reluctant Artist — an exhibit featuring about 50 of Shannon's pieces.

The exhibit will take place March 16-19 between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. on the fourth floor of the Untitled Art Society Gallery at 319-10 Avenue SW.

The entrance can be found in the alleyway, and a portion of the proceeds will go with the Canadian Mental Health Association.

"I don't have an artist's eye but I have a mother's determination, so hopefully that will get me the distance I need to go."

Proceed with caution: Alderman

► Unclear what SE transitway will entail ► Construction set for 2013-2014 ► Phase 1 of GreenTRIP funding will be $226M ► $150M from province

Calgary Transit has put forward a timeline of when a new transitway may be developed in the city's southeast, but one alderman is suggesting city council proceed with caution.

The land use planning and transportation committee will receive a report Wednesday outlining the next steps for delivering on a southeast transitway.

According to Neil McKendrick, Calgary Transit's manager of transit planning, due to financial constraints, an LRT is unlikely for sometime.

"One of the challenges we're going to be looking at in the next couple of months is, are there any other capital funds available to allow us to fund more transportation projects," said McKendrick.

Ward 10 Ald. Andre Chabot has been advocating for transit improvement in his part of the city but believes council shouldn't jump the gun on spending.

"(The province has) said it's a sure thing," said Chabot of the GreenTRIP funding.

"The question is, at what rate will they transfer those funds."

Chabot said he doesn't want to see the city shoulder any carrying costs if the province can't dole out the cash quick enough.

"I don't want to leverage away those grants through carrying costs, so that's why I'm saying we should move cautiously forward."

Nuclear fears grow

► Hundreds of thousands wait in emergency centres cut off from rescuers ► Millions without water

A 76-year-old missionary from Quebec has been identified as a victim of the earthquake and tsunami in Japan.

Andre Lachapelle, a member of the Quebec-based Society of Foreign Missions, was in Sendai when the quake hit.

Lachapelle tried to return to his home, but never made it. He was taken to hospital where he died of a heart attack.

Meanwhile, officials along a stretch of Japan's northeastern coast warned that the area could be hit by another tsunami today. The Meteorological Agency said there was no risk of another deadly wave.

The warning came as an explosion rocked the nearby Fukushima Dai-ichi nuclear power plant. TV footage showed smoke coming from the Fukushima Dai-ichi nuclear plant's No. 3 unit, 190 kilometres north of Tokyo. Officials believe it was a hydrogen explosion. Japan's chief cabinet secretary says the reactor's inner containment vessel holding nuclear rods is intact, easing some fears among the public.

More than 180,000 people have evacuated the area. Tokyo Electric Power Co. says three workers have been injured and seven are missing.

Officials have confirmed that at least 1,800 have died since the disaster hit. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

U.S. wants Khadr to face court

A terrorist collaborator is walking the streets because a Canadian judge wrongly decided to stay extradition proceedings against him, the federal government says.

In documents filed with Ontario's highest court ahead of an appeal hearing, Ottawa says Abdullah Khadr should be handed over to the United States to face terror-related charges.

Instead, by ordering the stay, Ontario Supreme Court Justice Christopher Speyer put Canada's security at risk and hindered the fight against terrorism, the government argues on behalf of the U.S.

The U.S. wants to try the Ottawa-born Khadr, whose younger brother, Omar, is serving time in Guantanamo Bay, on charges of supplying weapons to al-Qaida in Pakistan.

Khadr's lawyers argued that his self-incriminating statements were the product of torture in Pakistan in which the Americans had been complicit.

WHITE HAT SHOULD RIDE OFF INTO SUNSET

In Defence Of ...

MIKE MORRISON

Last week I was fortunate enough to catch the Malcolm Gladwell lecture.

His speech was as advertised: Funny, insightful and thought-provoking. The entire evening was perfect ... until Mayor Naheed Nenshi arrived on stage with a white cowboy hat. It all went downhill from there.

Am I the only one who, upon seeing that dreaded white-hat ceremony taking place, has to stop myself from standing up and screaming, "That wasn't our ideal!" Yet the white-hat ceremony remains something that's inflicted on many a visitor to our city — usually without prejudice or discretion.

Often billed as this city's top honour, it's always struck me as odd that we bestow it upon so many people — public speakers, dignitaries and the like — who are paid to be here in the first place. Does your boss give you an extra large coffee every morning just for showing up? I didn't think so. Naively rewarding people for doing something they're already getting paid to do seems a bit like sharing your best birthday gifts with the cool kids you bribed to come to your party.

Any time I watch a white-hat ceremony, I have uncomfortable flashbacks to when my parents would interrupt my dates to show off my high school yearbook. Your date might feign interest, but that's not why they came over, is it?

But there's another problem with the white hat and that's the hat itself. I get that the cowboy hat makes sense, primarily because of the Stampede. But does a cowboy hat really represent this city anymore? The closest many of us will actually get to being cowboys will be drunkenly riding the mechanical bull at Ranchmans.

Secondly, it's a white cowboy hat. I've never considered myself an expert in fashion, but handing out a gift that never looks good on anyone can't be a good idea. The white cowboy hat is the fanny pack of our generation; only it's more difficult to fit in a suitcase. We should want our distinguished guests to leave Calgary looking cool and a little sexy, not like retired volunteers.

But why give them anything at all? You don't see Vancouver handing out white umbrellas, now do you? The white hats should be saved for those who contribute year round to the city, not just those who happen to visit and possess a little bit of name recognition.

Presumably, Malcolm Gladwell would have been happy leaving Calgary with nothing but a paycheque. Instead, he gets to go through airport security hauling a 10-gallon plastic hat that can't actually fit over top his hair.

Where's the honour in that?

STOCKWELL DAY RIDES OFF INTO THE SUNSET:

Casting a wider relief net

Worth mentioning

Canadian web surfers are reaching into their pocketbooks to help with the relief effort in Japan.

The Canadian Red Cross says online tools like Twitter and Facebook have increased awareness of the disaster and encouraged people to donate.

The humanitarian group has already raised approximately $1 million since Friday.

Four other charities — CARE Canada, Oxfam Canada, Oxfam-Quebec and Save The Children Canada — have formed a group called the Humanitarian Coalition and began accepting donations Saturday.

Helping hands

The group says that while the Japanese government is well-prepared to respond to an earthquake, Canadians also want to help.

Doctors Without Borders says it hasn't decided whether to set up a program in Japan even though it already has a 10-person team on the ground.

"If there is enough medical needs, we will start a medical program," said spokesman Gregory Vandendaelen.

The Salvation Army has allocated $75,000 to help in Japan, while other organizations such as World Vision Canada and UNICEF are accepting donations to their general relief funds. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Super-fast networks to debut this fall

► Bandwidth consumption exploding as mobile apps take hold ► Carriers introducing 4G technology

Wireless carriers in Canada are making their networks even faster to meet the demand from smartphones and devices used by laptops to connect to the Internet.

Bell and Telus have upgraded their networks, not even two years old, to faster fourth-generation, or 4G, technology, while Videotron, MTS and SaskTel are on the same path.

But there have been technical arguments about whether these networks are truly 4G, and international standards have been relaxed recently to allow carriers to say they are operating such networks once they enhance their advanced networks.

4G
Technology analyst Duncan Stewart says a number of 4G devices should be in Canada by the fall, but initially there will be more Internet modems than smartphones.

Rory Altman of consulting group Altman Vilandrie & Company said carriers are "fibbing a little bit" about having 4G networks already, but noted they are faster for streaming video, loading graphics and opening big email files.

Rogers says it also has 4G network speed but is committed to long-term evolution network technology, which is expected to give mobile users an even faster experience, about the equivalent of a home Internet connection.

Bell and Telus are also testing LTE technology, while carriers such as Wind Mobile say they are on the path to an LTE network.

"All of this stuff about 'faux' G and it's not the real 4G is really marketing," says Duncan Stewart, director of Deloitte Canada Research. "But if you want to browse the web and look at pictures and especially look at videos you need higher speeds." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Job creation falls short of expectation

The Canadian economy created a smaller-than-expected 15,100 new jobs and saw an outright decline in full-time work. The tiny overall pickup, all part-time jobs, was below the consensus expectation for as many as 25,000 new jobs, but large enough to keep the unemployment rate at 7.8 per cent.

Creating a fairy tale

► Director Catherine Hardwicke talks about her long love for the story of Little Red Riding Hood ► She enjoyed being able to expand on the fears and emotions of the story

SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Catherine Hardwicke began her career as a production designer on films like Three Kings before transitioning into directing with Thirteen. With that auspicious debut, she instantly became one of the premiere female directors in Hollywood and entered the blockbuster arena in 2008 when Twilight became a surprise $390-million hit.

Hardwicke made a re-

"I loved that we could take a story everyone knows and add on layers that no one would expect."

DIRECTOR CATHERINE HARDWICKE

turn to the big screen with Red Riding Hood, a gothic horror adaptation of the classic fairy tale that in an odd way might be her most personal project.

"I loved the fairy tale when I was little and made my mother make me a red cloak so I could be Little Red Riding Hood on Halloween for two years straight," the director told Metro. "So I guess it's stirred into my blood."

"I was excited by this script because it went back to an old less sanitized version of the story. I liked the darkness and thought it was filled with opportunity."

In Hardwicke's hands, the film becomes a more frightening tale involving a werewolf as well as a love triangle that should please her Twilight followers. In other words, this isn't the bedtime story you remember.

"I think fairy tales take complicated childhood fears and emotions and play them out in an extreme way," explained Hardwicke. "They let children face their fears instead of pretending that's irrational. So pushing the story slightly into horror wasn't much of a stretch."

Following a film that required absolute reverence to the source material to appease squealing fans, the director relished the opportunity to take this classic fairy tale into any direction that she pleased.

"In Twilight I couldn't stray far because of the fans, but the great thing about a fairy tale like this is that there is no definitive version," said Hardwicke. "I loved that we could take a story everyone knows and add on layers that no one would expect."

David and Victoria Beckham are officially expecting a daughter, the soccer star announced, according to People magazine.

"Obviously, we're very lucky to be expecting again, and this is the first time I'm going to say it: It's a little girl," David said at an L.A. Galaxy fan event.

Having a premature child isn't just a medical emergency, but also a family emergency as parents deal with conflicting and confusing emotions about the obstacles that may lie ahead

Raising preemies: An emotional roller-coaster

► Melissa Orlando with her twin daughters, Fiona and Mallory, who were born premature.

My wife, Ivandy, wasn't due to deliver our son for another three months when her water broke. We rushed to the hospital where we learned our baby's world was drying up around him. Nicholas was born weighing just two pounds, two ounces.

The neonatal intensive care unit (NICU) became our second home. As parents of a preemie, we were plunged into a community of experts that we hardly knew existed. And we had to learn to cope not just with our son's needs, but also with our emotions.

About 12.9 million premature babies are born around the world each year. But only recently have doctors started looking beyond survival and focused on improving outcomes for premature children outside the NICU.

Children born prematurely may have learning disabilities, attention deficits, cerebral palsy, vision and hearing problems, respiratory illnesses or other conditions.

Doctors are also finding the trauma of a premature birth can be devastating to parents, who may suffer from depression and anxiety disorders such as post-traumatic stress disorder.

"Prematurity is not just a medical crisis, it's a family crisis. There are confusing emotions," says Mara Tesler Stein, a clinical psychologist and co-author of Parenting Your Premature Baby and Child.

Stein compares parents' experience of grieving after the birth of a premature child to that of losing a loved one—an especially confusing emotion when you are in fact gaining a loved one.

Most parents agree that the hardest part of having a premature child is leaving him or her alone in the NICU.

"I felt like I was abandoning them," explains Melissa Orlando, a Colorado art teacher who gave birth to premature twins. "I did a lot of talking with them, explaining I was going home to sleep."

The next hardest thing is the uncertainty: No one could give us a definitive prognosis for our baby because every premature child is different.

Dr. Brian Carter, director of the Neonatal Follow-up Program at the Monroe Carell, Jr. Children's Hospital at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, says predicting outcomes for preemies is difficult because treatments are always evolving.

"Many clinicians may be reluctant to glibly inform or saturate a parent's mind with all sorts of potential concerns that sound overwhelming and potentially very negative and frightening," Carter explains.

In retrospect, we were lucky to have doctors who remained optimistic—even if they weren't always entirely honest about all the obstacles that might lie ahead. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mommy gifts

Here are some suggestions for thoughtful gifts for moms-to-be.

- Put together an "at-home" spa basket complete with calming oils, bubble bath, classical music, a light-hearted novel and slippers.

- Look for items that have dual purpose, like a backpack, that acts as a baby carrier, or a stroller designed for jogging and keeping baby comfortable.

- Get a gift card to a restaurant she's always wanted to try.

Say hello to a simple, yet exotic, dish

► Serving these mildly spicy lentil spinach fritters with fruit chutney creates an interesting combination

DINNER EXPRESS

EMILY RICHARDS
FOOD@METRONEWS.CA

Canadians are increasingly exposed to many different flavours as a result of sampling foods from around the world.

And if you're up for trying new things, you'll love these easy to make lentil spinach fritters.

Not only are they mildly spicy, but they're also packed with goodness from the spinach and split red lentils. Serve them with chutney for a great mix of flavours.

Preparation:

1 In saucepan, cover lentils with water and bring to boil. Reduce heat and simmer for 20 minutes. Drain well.

2 In a food processor, add cooked lentils and 3 tbsp (45 mL) of water; process until smooth, scraping sides occasionally. Scrape into bowl.

3 Add spinach, green onions, cilantro, red pepper flakes, 2 tbsp (30 mL) of the flour, cumin, salt, baking powder and garlic, stirring well. Add more flour, as needed, to make a smooth dough.

4 In large non-stick skillet heat 1 tbsp (15 mL) of the oil over medium heat. Drop lentil mixture by heaping tablespoons (15 mL) into pan. Cook for 2 minutes on each side or until lightly browned. Remove from pan. Cover and keep warm. Repeat with remaining oil and mix.

5 Serve with chutney.

Raising a glass of ‘green’ beer

► Breweries turning to cleaner methods of production

Green beer is a tradition on St. Patrick's Day. But does "green," eco-friendly beer actually exist? Steam Whistle Brewing in Toronto has made significant steps. Their bottles are so thick they are reused dozens of times, they use no glue or paper labels, and they have biofuel delivery trucks. On a smaller scale, microbreweries, like Nelson Brewing Company Ltd. in British Columbia, brew in small batches, close to home, saving big on transportation, storage and environmental damage.

How can the brewing and selling of beer be made

cleaner?
"It begins with ingredients," says Sybil Taylor, founder of Steam Whistle's environmental committee. "People are concerned about what they're putting in their bodies. We start

Cheers!

- According to Statistics Canada, the average adult Albertan downs 89.8 litres of beer per year. That ranks fourth among all the provinces and territories.
- The national average is 85.6 litres per year.
- The Yukon Territory leads the way — by a huge margin — at 145.1.

with all-natural ingredients, GMO-free, and no preservatives. Packaging is important too. Our green bottle really is green!"

Nelson brewmaster Mike Kelly agrees. "All our beer is certified organic," he says. "With that, you buy into the idea that organic products are cleaner or greener — better for the environment. Better for the farmers, too, because of the sustainability of various ingredients.”

Does organic beer taste better than mainstream commercial brews?
“Absolutely,” Taylor enthuses. “There’s a refreshing, clean taste because it's naturally carbonated. It isn't gassy, and doesn't make you feel bloated."

Will beer drinkers switch brands for the environment?
"I think they will," says Kelly. "It's really part of a larger movement. My family buys organic food, and we have for years. There's a 20 per cent growth in organic food sales per year, at least in B.C. There's more and more organic beers becoming available. The awareness is there, and people think that by supporting organic products (and beer is one of them) they are supporting sustainable business."

Your suspicion about formaldehyde in no-iron shirts, also known as wrinkle-free, is spot-on wrinkle-free, is spot-on. I hate to iron as much as the next person, but to make cotton iron-free the fabric is typically soaked in formaldehyde. When you press it flat it becomes wrinkle-resistant. Retailers warn that due to the change in molecular structure of the cotton shirt, the fabric becomes more brittle. This means the life expectancy of your husband's no-iron shirt may be cut by 25 per cent.

If a short lifespan isn't discouragement enough, these low-maintenance duds are impregnated with a cancer-causing chemical. Formaldehyde is found in more than no-iron shirts. It's used in consumer products like air fresheners, nail polish, bed sheets, kitchen cabinets, carpets, furniture — you get the idea. Since formaldehyde is known to emit fumes from products and can be inhaled, avoid it.

Turning Point

KRUZE
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

The giant scale stood firmly in the middle of the modelling agency reception area.

"No more cranberry

MODEL AGENCY

muffins for you," the modelling agency executive told Liis wagging his finger in her face.

Liis knew that if she wanted to be a model she needed to be skinny but the muffin was all she had eaten that day. Liis left and never went back.

Today, Liis is a successful plus-size model and hasn't looked at a scale with fear since.

Her modelling has taken her all over the world and now working with the Ben Barry Agency, Liis is inspiring young women to redefine their ideas of size and beauty. "For me it's important to get young girls to look at beauty and media from a difference perspective."

Several years ago three models died due to the effects of malnutrition. Liis says the fashion world has reached a turning point and is slowly realizing the average woman isn't a Size 4. Liis and the Ben Barry Agency are leading the way.

"We don't want to be just an agency. We want to be agents of change."

Feel-good fashion

Liis' advice for young models:

► You are perfect just as you are.

► Love your body. Your shape/size is only a limitation if you believe it is.

► Banish the word "hate" from your vocabulary and never use it to describe any part of you!

► Be a voice for change. Tell companies through Twitter, Facebook and emails that you want to see someone like you in its ads.

Squeezing into school

As the population of most Canadian universities continues to swell, the question of where to house students is becoming increasingly urgent.

The situation is more desperate in several smaller cities, including Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., where residences are bursting at the seams and surrounding areas report low vacancy rates.

York student Steven Broadly says he's heard of as many as 12 students living in one of the newly built townhouses located on the periphery of the Toronto university.

Wallace says part of the problem is the lack of maintenance being done by thrifty landlords.

"The area around the university is so poorly maintained because students are so transient, so landlords don't always feel like they need to keep up the buildings," Wallace said.

April Stewart, a member of the Ontario Landlords Association, says she has encountered few instances of students taking their landlords to the Landlord and Tenant Board.

Stewart concedes this may be because students don't know their rights, and she urges them to contact their community legal clinics for free advice.

She says she wants "nothing to do with" landlords who neglect their premises.

Exhibit puts hidden talent in focus

For more than five decades, Vivian Maier, a nanny, shot tens of thousands of photos of the world around her. Her passion remained hidden to most, until now.

She scoured the streets day and night, venturing into strange and sometimes dicey neighbourhoods. She wore a hat, sturdy shoes and a camera, and was always at the ready.

A woman in a white fur and evening dress drifting in the darkness toward a '56 two-tone Chevrolet.

Click.

A curious little boy,undaunted by his size, using an empty window frame as a ladder so he can peek into a giant box.

Click.

Fractions of seconds, captured by Vivian Maier a half-century ago or more — fleeting moments of life on the streets at a time when men wore fedoras and dragged on Lucky Strike cigarettes. Maier observed it all without judgment. This was her hobby, not her job. But for more than five decades, it also was her life. She shot tens of thousands of photos. Most were never printed and many were not even developed. Few were seen by anyone but her.

Vivian Maier, who passed away in 2009, wanted it that way. She guarded her privacy so zealously she did not even want people to know her full name.

She and her photos seemed destined for obscurity until a young man with an eye for bargains stopped by an auction house one day. He paid about $400 for a grocery box stuffed with thousands of negatives.

He knew only that they came from a repossessed storage locker that had been rented by an elderly woman. He carted the negatives home, not expecting much — maybe just some illustrations for a history book he was co-authoring about his Northwest Side neighbourhood. He didn't find any. But he did unearth a far bigger treasure.

John Maloof had stumbled upon an undiscovered artist whose photography is now being compared to the giants, a reclusive woman who, in death, is attracting the kind of attention and acclaim she would have shunned in life.

Maloof, a real estate agent, knew nothing about photography, but when he started scanning some of the negatives in his computer, even a novice could see they were special.

Shortly after Maloof started buying Maier's film, he tried, to no avail, to interest galleries and museums. Then he posted a blog featuring her work on Flickr (the online photo-sharing site), and asked what he should do with the negatives. Ideas and encouragement poured in.

This winter, Maloof finally succeeded in getting a one-woman show for Maier at the Chicago Cultural Center, her U.S. debut.

Maloof is now working to assemble a book of her photos. He also has joined his partner, Rydzon, and a Danish filmmaker to produce a documentary, Finding Vivian Maier.

Manitoba tops at Brier

► Manitoba's Jeff Stoughton beats Ontario's Glenn Howard to win gold ► Alberta's Kevin Martin falls in bronze-medal game

Skip Jeff Stoughton has been cool, calm and confident all week at the Tim Hortons Brier.

With rock-steady curling from his Manitoba rink, he had every reason to be. Stoughton was in control throughout the round robin and simply got stronger at playoff time.

His stellar play was the difference in an 8-6 victory over Ontario's Glenn Howard in the championship game yesterday.

"There is nothing better than this feeling right now," Stoughton said. "We said we were going to win this thing right from the get-go. This is what we were here for and we did it. "I couldn't be prouder of my team. Just awesome."

Stoughton was in control after hitting a clutch double takeout for two points in the eighth end. Howard scored two in the ninth to make it a two-point game, but Stoughton hit another double takeout in the 10th to blank the end and win it.

It was Stoughton's third career men's national curling title and his first since 1999. He will represent Canada at the world men's curling championship April 2-10 at Evraz Place in Regina.

"We're going to put the Maple Leaf on our back and we're going to rock out in Regina," Stoughton said. "It's just going to be awesome."

Howard, who was fourth in the round robin at 8-3, had a challenging route to the final. He had to beat Kevin Martin of Alberta — the 2010 Olympic champ — 5-4 in the 3-4 playoff game Saturday afternoon. Howard then edged 2006 Olympic champion Brad Gushue of Newfoundland and Labrador 7-6 in the semifinal just a few hours later.

Stoughton, meanwhile, enjoyed the day off after beating Gushue in the 1-2 playoff game Friday night in a battle of 9-2 rinks.

GMs meet amid public outcry over concussions

The NHL's general managers will find themselves in the eye of the storm on Florida's Atlantic coast this week.

With the outcry over concussions having grown to a fever pitch, the GMs will gather for their annual meetings today until Wednesday under some pressure to deliver a message about the state of the game.

They've already spent considerable time grappling with concussions and illegal hits — developing Rule 48 outlawing blindside head hits at these meetings a year ago — and won't necessarily conclude this session with any new measures to propose.

If anything, the divide between those involved in the sport and those on the outside will likely be highlighted during the meetings in Boca Raton.

In the wake of the devastating head and neck injury suffered by Montreal's Max Pacioretty last Tuesday, calls for more safety in the NHL came from all corners — everyone from Prime Minister Stephen Harper to league sponsor Air Canada to Canadiens owner Geoff Molson weighed in.

It was much more difficult to detect a desire for change from those who have spent a lifetime in the game.

"Every time there's an injury, we're running around trying to address the specific injury," Maple Leafs coach Ron Wilson said over the weekend. "I think we've done a pretty good job of eliminating headshots but it doesn't matter what the rules are — there's still going to be these situations. I wish everybody would stop and think."

"We're playing a contact sport, people are going to get hurt."

Aries March 21-April 20 You may be tempted to force someone to give you what it is you desire but if you do your efforts will backfire. Persuasion is the key to success this week.

Taurus April 21-May 21 If you don't feel like making an effort today there is no point pushing yourself. Focus on activities that make you feel good about yourself and let the rest take care of itself.

Gemini May 22-June 21 You don't have to shout to make yourself heard. In fact the planets indicate that the louder you yell over the next 24 hours the less likely it is others will listen to you.

Cancer June 22-July 22 You know how to move fast when there is money at stake but there is a danger you could move too fast for your own good today. Most likely it's because greed has got the better of you. Think again — and slow down.

Leo July 23-Aug. 23 The most important thing this coming week is that you do what makes you happy, not what makes other people happy. You may be generous by nature but you have needs and desires too.

Virgo Aug. 24-Sept. 22 Don't worry too much if you find it hard to understand what is going on around you today — on this occasion ignorance is bliss. If you get caught up in other people's affairs you may not be able to find a way out again.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 If others make negative comments about what you are trying to do it's only because they fear you might succeed. The more criticism you get today the more you can be certain you are doing something right.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 A week or so from now you will get the opportunity to take a break, but today you must push yourself as hard and as fast as your mind and body can take you. Go the extra mile.

Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 You can, if you wish, sit back and let things happen but will you be satisfied with the results? Probably not. Get out of that armchair and put yourself about a bit.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 You're pulling your punches a bit. Certain individuals are not getting the hard ride they clearly deserve. Allow yourself to get angry, even if it's mainly an act. Others will respect you more if they think you are serious.

Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 If something you value goes out of your life today don't get too upset about it, because it is making space for something even more valuable to come in.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 You'll be in a generous mood as the new week begins, eager to share your own good fortune with those you live and work with. But keep a little in reserve. You know how quickly things can change. SALLY BROMPTON
